RE: NO CALL LIST!!

To Whom It May Concern:

Please, keep the Wisconsin Do Not Call list as is. Do not take it away. I live in a household of 10 where 1/3 of the people speak fluent English, 1/3 speaks broken English, and 1/3 no English. Before the Do Not Call List, I would have to screen these telemarketers and interest groups and eventually hang up on them. They would usually call, ask for one of my family members and that family member will get sucked into something they have no idea what they're saying yes to then I would have to clean up the problem. It annoys me every single day that I would have to explain to these telemarketers that the person they're asking for does not speak English, they'll hang up, then someone from that same company will call back the next day asking for the same person.

My phone's been quiet ever since I've signed up for the Wisconsin No Call List. I would like to keep it that way. I have families living in Michigan who are listed under the Federal No Call list and they're still getting telemarketing calls day and night. This tells me that the Wisconsin No Call List is working for it's constituents in Wisconsin while the Federal No Call list isn't effective at all.

Please don't let the special interest groups push into taking this away from the common average person. If they really want us to look as their product, there's always junk mail.

Sincerely,

Ab Yang

A concerned constituent of Wisconsin.

Please don't let anyone weaken
the Wisconsin "Do not Call" list.

Our family has really enjoyed not being interrupted by phone calls
we don't want or request.

An unsolicited phone call from a charity is just as annoying as any other call. I put them on my own list. If they call I don't open any of their mail after that.

Sincerely

Arthur A. Lucero

Please continue the "no call list."

Since I have been on the list I have received very few telemarketing calls.

These calls are very stressful especially to an older person who has limited mobility.

I would never buy a product or service over the telephone.
